

Intersectionality

We all have unique identities that make us who we are. We are not just one characteristic. Instead, our different identities intersect to create a unique identity. We can cultivate empathy and understanding when we see our commonality and uniqueness.

CHECK ALL THAT RESONATE WITH OR APPLY TO YOU

NOTE: Your participation in this activity is voluntary. Please share only as much or as little as you are comfortable sharing.

- 20s
- Feminine
- Single
- Hispanic
- PhD
- Jewish
- Domestic Partner
- Only Child
- 40s
- Immigrant
- Diabetic
- 30s
- Physical Disability
- Spiritual
- Previous/Current Stress
- 60s
- Ivy-League Graduate
- LGBT Ally
- Buddhist
- Atheist
- Hindu
- Christian
- African Descent
- 70s
- Non-Binary/
Genderqueer
- Age Is Just A Number!
- Military Spouse/
Family Member
- Previous/Current
Depression
- Godparent
- Widow/Widower
- 1st Generation American
- In A Relationship
- Extrovert
- Bisexual
- Gay
- Previous/Current
Chronic Pain
- Refugee
- Trans Woman
- Community College
Graduate
- Agnostic
- Asian/Pacific Islander
- Indian
- Multi-Racial
- United States Citizen
- Recovering
Substance User
- Previous/Current PTSD
- Midwestern
- Faith: None
- Sibling
- Adopted
- Aunt/Uncle
- Latinx
- West Coast
- Southern
- East Coast
- Caucasian/White
- Straight
- Other Gender
- Parent
- Married
- Twin
- Grandparent
- Caregiver
- Introvert
- Cancer Survivor
- Man
- Masculine
- Woman
- 50s
- Divorced
- European
- Single Parent
- Queer
- Muslim
- Trans Man
- Lesbian
- Ex-Pat
- Multi-Lingual
- Veteran
- 1st Generation
College Student
- Learning Disability
- Previous/Current Anxiety
- Public College/
University Graduate
- Historical Black Colleges/
Universities (HBCU)

Anything Else?

---

---

---